and Crossman, West & Leonard,—the latter firm well known in Taunton, Massachusetts.

A mould for making pewter buttons and several buttons of different sizes recall the fact that in Revolutionary days Richard Lee, an Englishman who had settled in Taunton, is said to have supplied buttons for some of the Continental uniforms.

Coming down to the present, a few examples of the work of Jules Brateau of Paris have been included for comparison with that of Briot, who has inspired him to produce objects so delicately and beautifully ornamented that one wishes the material were more durable.

The exhibition will continue until January 15. A small pamphlet containing a bibliography, list of American pewterers, and a short introduction on pewter will be found in the gallery and may be purchased at the entrance of the Museum. On the afternoons of December 16 and 17 talks on pewter will be given in the gallery by Mr. Eugene De Forest of New Haven. The second of the series of Thursday Conferences announced in another column is devoted to pewter and will be given on January 11. F. V. P.

Notes

THE EXHIBITION of Japanese Prints by Kiyonaga, Buncho, and Utamaro, referred to in the initial article, was opened in the Renaissance Court December 11, to continue during the month.

THE MUSEUM has purchased the "Portrait of My Uncle Daniel and His Family," by Ignacio Zuloaga, from the collection of pictures recently exhibited in this city under the auspices of the Copley Society. The collection is to be shown in several other cities, and the portrait will take its place in the Museum galleries upon the completion of the tour, in the autumn of 1917. The same family group, treated in a less comprehensive way, is the subject of the picture exhibited under the title "Portraits," at the Salon of 1899, and bought by the French Government for the Luxembourg Museum.

DURING CHRISTMAS WEEK the Museum will be open free to the public, excepting on Monday, which is Christmas Day. A Docent will meet visitors at the Huntington Avenue Entrance at three o'clock each day.
